“ When Emily and I first started hanging out with each other, I knew right away she was someone special and I never got tired of her company. However, I was afraid of wearing out my welcome so I didn't spend too much time hanging out with her. One day we were talking on the phone and I confessed I would be perfectly happy spending lots more time with her but was afraid of being too clingy. She said she felt the same way! After that we spent ad much time together as we liked and didn't worry about it. She was very much a big sister to me.
