“ Tucker from day one was a happy baby. Not much of a sleeper he was active. That continued on. He from an early age was in love with lights. He couldn't wait to put up Christmas lights. If it was left up to him we would have them year around. They made him so happy. Tucker never met a stranger. If he started talking to you, you was his friend. As he got older his favorite thing to do was ride his bike. He smiled and waved at everyone passing by. If he got you stopped he would talk to you. He enjoyed school, he always wanted to help. No matter what he would be there for you. He only wanted to make everyone's day brighter. Never have I met a kid who could tell you so much info about cars. He talked about them all the time. We could be driving down the highway and he would start pointing out different kinds and tell you why you needed that car. He was looking forward to learning how to drive. He had a list a mile long of what kind of car he wanted for his first. He was the most kind-hearted boy you would ever meet. His purpose on this earth for the short time he was here was to make you smile. If he could make you laugh, he would. He would do anything for you. I'm going to miss him asking me all the time to take him to McDonalds or bring him some home. I would always say gross. How can you eat there all the time buddy.

He would just say "I like it mom, can you get me some". We just celebrated his 14th birthday in April. We took a trip just me and him to Pigeon Forge. It was all about him, I told him we would do whatever he wanted to do. We went to Star Cars and he got his picture taken with his two favorite cars. When they let him get inside he was beaming with excitement. We went to a dinner show and the whole time he would say, Tiffiny would love this, can we bring her back to see this next time. Our last trip was about two weeks ago, we went to the beach. Swimming every day, riding his bike at night with his disco light on. He had so much fun on the trip. The 4th of July we took him to Charlie's Fireworks and let him pick out what he wanted. Late that night we set them off, he had a blast.
